Critics Plan Effort To Cut Foreign Aid

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP)—Critics of President Eisenhower's foreign aid program today mapped new efforts to trim the $3,637,000,000 authorization measure further when it comes up for Senate debate.

Sen. Wayne L. Morse (D-Ore.), one of three senators who voted against approving the bill in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Friday night, was drafting a critical minority report which he said would be ready Wednesday.

Morse also was expected to present a series of amendments mainly aimed at restricting the long-range aspects of military aid and economic loan programs written into the bill ty the committee.

Will Support Cuts

Senate Democratic Whip Mike Mansfield (Mont.), who lost on an effort in the committee to slash 800 million dollars from the President's original $3,865,000,000 request, said he would support additional cuts on the floor but did not plan to sponsor them himself.

Mansfield said he expected the Senate to begin debate on the measure Thursday or Friday and complete action in two or three days.

Eisenhower supporters won a substantial victory when the Foreign Relations Committee cut the measure by a net of only 227 million dolars — far less than had been expected. The group voted cuts totaling 252 million dollars but wrote in an extra 25 million dollars for Latin America which the President did not ask.

Appear United

Also, Senate Republican ranks, often split on foreign aid, appeared united behind the reduced program alhough some GOP senators are expected to back further cuts.

M'Clellan Cites Need For Laws To Protect Labor

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP)—Chairman John L. McClellan of the Senate Rackets Committee said today his recessed investigation of the bakery workers union already has uncovered a "dictatorship" by the union's leaders.

He said Congress should study whether the tax laws need tightening to prevent union leaders from making personal, hidden profits from "commercialized" testimonial dinners and "shake down" contributions by members and fearful employers.

The hearings in their first five days produced charges of corruption, "goon squad" brutality, communism, extraction of "contributions" from employers, and use of union funds to buy a Cadillac and pay expenses of a girl friend for union President James C. Cross.

Committee counsel Robert F. Kennedy said the hearings will resume Thursday with Cross in the witness chair.

Cross was accused Friday of putting his long - legged brunette girl friend, Kay Lower, on the union payroll as an "organizer" and taking her about the country on conventions. A woman of the same name and description has been arrested seven times on prostitution charges in Los Angeles.

Kennedy said the committee will go deeper into evidence of "complete control of the policies of the union by its international president (Cross), with virtually no check by the members."

Girard Backers Send Delegation To White House

WASHINGTON, June 8 (AP)—An international uproar over the impending trial of an American GI in Japan headed toward the White House today.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said a delegation from Army Specialist 3.C. William S. Girard's home town will be received Monday to discuss the case.

The group, including Girard's older brother, Louis, 28, will see Edward A. McCabe, associate counsel to President Eisenhower, shortly after arriving by train from Ottawa, Ill.

Asks Reversal

Petitions being brought to Washington by the home town committee call on the United States to reverse its decision to permit a Japanese court to try Girard for the killing of a Japanese woman scrap scavenger.

Secretary of State Dulles shied away from comment on the case.

"I do not want to get involved in that," he told reporters at a New York airport. "It is before the courts, you know."

Subpoenaes were served at the State and Defense Departments yesterday for records in the case. Tuesday's court hearing is on an application by attorneys for Girard for an order directing that he be produced in U. S. District Court.

Mother Kills 3 Small Tots In Michigan

DETROIT, June 8 (UP)— A registered nurse who "saw no future" for her three young children suffocated them with a pillow today and then held their heads underwater in a bathtub to make sure they were dead.

The woman, Mrs. Constance Wheeldon, killed her son, James, 4, and daughters, Deborah, 18 months, and Diane, 6 months, and tried to take her own life by turning on gas jets on a stove and furnace.

She telephoned police headquarters and announced "I just killed my three children" after turning on the gas jets, apparently thinking she would be dead by the time police arrived.

Mrs. Wheeldon collapsed as police knocked on the front door but was carried to the front lawn and revived after the officers broke into the house.

Police found the bodies of James and Deborah floating face down in the bathtub. The body of Diane was found in a front bedroom.

Mrs. Wheeldon, the daughter of a Ford Motor Co. physician, told police she "saw no future" for the children and had been "planning to do it" for a long time.

Jes' Ramblin'

Friends of the Van Odom's here will be interested to know that George Herman Mahon, the Congressman who for over 20 years has held this office from the State of Texas is a first cousin of Mrs. Van Odom. Congressman Mahon was born and raised in Claiborne parish and at an early age moved to west Texas. At the death of his mother, Mrs. S. L. Sims of Haynesville, mother of Mrs. Van Odom cared for the boy as a foster child. Now when he writes to his father, brothers and sisters he also has a letter for Mrs. Sims, whom he regards as a mother.

When Mr. and Mrs. Van Odom the other day read on the editorial page of the Morning World, Bascom Timmons' column, they swelled with pride when it stated "Some of the veterans in the House of Representatives said that Rep. George H. Mahon's speech was the best heard in that chamber in 40 years." It had reference to the defense appropriation bill.

PASCAGOULA, MISS.

Prominent Attorney Bonded In Sex Attack On Negress

PASCAGOULA, Miss., June 8 (UP) — Young attorney Bernard Gautier, a member of a prominent Jackson county family, faces grand jury action here charged with the statutory rape of his 17 year-old Negro baby-sitter, the United Press learned today.

Gautier, a 1956 graduate of the University of Mississippi school of law, was released under $2,000 bond pending the next session of the grand jury in November.

Filed By Parents

The affidavit against Gautier was filed by the girl's parents, who are highly respected members of the Negro community here.

Authorities are reluctant to discuss the incident which came to light more than a month after it occurred.

Gautier refused to comment when questioned.

Dist. Atty. Boyce Holleman said he had not received the case passed questions to County Atty. Donald Combest, who is charged with leading the prosecution, said he had "heard" about the charges but knew nothing first hand.

Combest referred questions to peace justice John Henley who said: "I don't want to give out anything about that. It's not completed yet."

Henley's docket showed that the charges were referred through the circuit clerk's office for the grand jury docket. Gautier waived preliminary hearing before making bond, binding him to the grand jury and disposing of the case in JP court.

Found On Docket

However, the charges were found by this reporter on page 203 of Henley's criminal docket.

Further checking showed the alleged crime took place on the night of April 27 when Gautier took the girl home from baby-sitting at his home. Her parents said they later found her body covered with ant bites said to have occurred during the act.

Officials of an out-of-town parochial school attended by the girl described her as being of "high moral character." She told her parents she was forced into the act.

The parents said they have been unable to engage a lawyer to assist in the prosecution. The alleged victim was examined at a hospital on the night of the incident, but the parents have received no report from the doctor who made the examination.

Senator Johnson Proposes Nations Clash On 'Ideas'

NEW YORK, June 8 (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson proposed tonight that the United States and Soviet Russia present their ideas on each other's television and radio once a week.

"I am calling for an open curtain for full discussion of the immediate urgent problems facing our people," he told a conference of the United Jewish Appeal in a prepared speech.

"We should insist on the right to state our case on disarmament in detail to the Soviet people.

"We should have weekly appearances during this year on Soviet radio and television, and we should offer similar facilities here."

Asked by Red

The Texas Democrat noted that Soviet leader Nikita Krushchev, in his filmed interview telecast in the United States by CBS last Sunday, called for competition between Socialist and capitalist states.

"There is one form of competition — the clash of ideas—that Americans would welcome with delight," Johnson said.

Senate Page Boy And Daughter Of Diplomat Vanish

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP)—Love can't win in the case of a young Senate page boy and the 16-year-old daughter of a Swedish diplomat who have been missing for a week and are believed to have eloped.

The girl's father, Col. Stig Wennerstrom, holds the trump card that is certain to end his daughter's romance once she is found—her passport.

The girl, Christina, vanished last Sunday as her parents were packing to go home to Stockholm. Also missing was her boy friend, Huw Williams, 17, a page in the Senate and son of Mrs. Donna Williams, a Senate clerical employe.

Mrs. Williams said the two are "madly in love."

Cold View

But Wennerstrom, military attache at the Swedish embassy, took a cold view of the suspected elopment. At his request, police in 13 states were alerted to be on the lookout for the couple. Today, the Swedish embassy said it had asked the FBI to help.

Wennerstrom said he was going back to Sweden as planned on Tuesday even if his daughter has not been located. He said she would have no choice but to return anyway when she is found.

"We will have to keep our plans for leaving Tuesday," he said. "I hope they can be found before then. But I have her passport and when we leave, she will be here illegally. When she is found, the immigration autherities will force her to leave the country."

Not only will immigration laws be working against Christina's romance. So will those forbidding the marriage of a minor without her parents' consent.

Wennerstrom said he believed his daughter and young Williams

Anti-Coagulant Drugs Dropped By Eisenhower

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP)—President Eisenhower no longer is taking anti - coagulant drugs regularly, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty reported today.

In answer to a reporter's question, Hagerty said the President now is taking the anti-coagulants on a "very intermittent" basis. He started taking the drug after his heart attack Sept. 25, 1955.

Hagerty said the anti-coagulant, which prevents undue blood-clotting, was dropped gradually from the President's regular treatment. Down to only one treatment a week, Eisenhower finally dropped it from his regular routine about a month ago.

Hagerty said that as far as he knows the President is not receiving any special medication at this time.

He said the President's weight now is 172½ pounds, close to the weight of his West Point days. He weighed 178 pounds just before suffering his heart attack.

Legislature May End Fiscal Meet Quickly Monday

BATON ROUGE, June 8 (UP)—The Louisiana Legislature reconvenes at 4 p.m. Monday, but leaders in both chambers predict little action.

Rep. Sam Cashio of Iberville, house administration spokesman said, "I don't think anything will come up unless we have a lot of speeches with some of the lawmakers who want to kiss and make up."

He said the lower chamber will probably reconvene about 11:30 and stay in session until about 12:30 before ending the 1957 fiscal meeting.

Cashio predicted a proposed resolution for a committee to study insurance laws, especialy in connection with formation of new companies, won't pass because the house "is fed up with resolutions."

There may be a few Senate amendments to House bills to consider, Cashio said.

Sen. B. B. Rayburn of Bogalusa, senate administration leader, said the upper chamber would probably convene 20 to 30 minutes Monday afternoon.

Freedom For Germans Asked

BONN, Germany, June 8 (UP)—The West German government appealed to Russia today to release an estimated 80,000 to 100,000 German civilians still held in the Soviet Union.

The appeal was made in a note delivered to the Kremlin this morning by Dr. Wilhelm Haas, West German ambassador to Moscow.

ORLEANS CASE

Says State Police Hold 'Hostages'

NEW ORLEANS, June 8 (UP)—A New Orleans mother and her two Tennessee house guests claimed today state police are holding them as hostages.

The mother, Mrs. Maureen Morrison said she and her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee Beeler of Knoxville were arrested Friday morning. They were booked with vagrancy, pending investigation of being fugitives from justice in Tennessee.

They were arrested after Mrs. Morrison's husband, James C. Morrison, fled from Louisiana state police when police sought to arrest him on a fugitive warrant from Tennessee.

"They are holding us as hostages to force my husband to give himself up," Mrs. Morrison said.

She said she was forced to leave her 10-year-old son with neighbors as well as Mrs. Beeler's 18-month-old baby.

"They wouldn't even give me time to get my son off to school," Mrs. Morrison said.

Morrison fled from state police Capt. Ben Morgan and Sgt. Nile Mack yesterday.

Mrs. Morrison said the officers called at their home and presented the Tennessee warrant.

She said her husband had been involved in a case in Knoxville concerning a stolen truck in which he had hitch-hiked. She said he put up bond, however, and was allowed to return home.

Later he learned the case was dropped, she said.

Morrison agreed to surrender when officers called, but asked that he be allowed to wash and dress. He entered the bathroom.

In a few minutes police got suspicious and checked the bathroom and found he had gone.

"We're not vagrants and we're not fugitives," Mrs. Morrison said. "They have no right to hold us."

They are being held for state police in a city jail. City police said they didn't know when they will be released.

'LIKE FLOCK OF MOTHER HENS'

Authorities Rank Morris High As Jailhouse Romeo

GULFPORT, Miss., June 8 (UP)—Dale Morris may rank as one of the greatest jailhouse romeos of all time.

Morris escaped from jail here Thursday in a manner that left authorities baffled. He slipped away after a deputy locked him in a room to receive a long-distance phone call.

Deputies now reveal that women poured letters, money and food to Morris while he was facing murder charges.

The Montana cowboy left a cardboard box full of letters — most of them from women.

Many contained money, some had prayers. One carried a picture and a note which read:

"Dear Dale. . .I'm sending this check for $300 to help you. It's all I have in the world. I'm praying for you so they'll find you not guilty. I'm also enclosing a picture, in case you want to look me up when you get out. Love. . ."

While in jail his bank account built up to $3,500 with several hundred dollars of it coming from women admirers.

Morris told deputies he did not know any of the women personally.

"They just read about his story in the papers," a deputy said, "and like a flock of mother hens, they wanted to help him."

One of the women gave money to Morris and visited him often. She is Peggy Goudelock, who is now being sought by police for questioning.

The former Gulfport woman took Morris's son to California about a week before Morris escaped.

If Morris is captured he will face the fourth trial for the murder of Charles Flink of Bay St. Louis. The first three resulted in mistrials.

In addition, he must face trials on a narcotics charge, and Dist. Atty. Boyce Holleman said he will be charged with escape.

Deputies said his recent indictment for possessing narcotics did not bother his woman callers.

A Harvey, La., barmaid continued her visits and letters and a woman from Bay St. Louis visited him on Wednesdays, occasionally bringing him fried chicken and cake.

50-Mile Winds Hit In Squalls

NEW ORLEANS, June 8 (UP)—The year's first tropical disturbance sprang up in the Gulf of Mexico today and headed for the Apalachicola Bay area of Northwest Florida where winds up to 50 miles an hour were expected to strike before dawn.

It was well below hurricane strength of 75 miles an hour velocity and the weather bureau here declined to call it a full fledged "storm." Nothing short of a hurricane would cause serious wind damage but the weather bureau warned of tides three feet above normal which could cause minor shoreline flooding.

The weather bureau also did not give the blow a name. The first authentic storm of 1957 is slated to be dubbed "Audrey".

Tropical Depresion

Late yesterday the tropical "depression", as the weather bureau described it, was centered 100 miles southwest of Port St. Joe, Fla., and was moving northeastward at 15 miles an hour.

"It was expected to move inland before dawn near Apalachicola," the advisory said. Apalachicola is a small fishing port on a Peninsula about half-way between Jacksonville, Fla., on the Atlantic and Mobile, Ala., on the Gulf.

"The heaviest squals are expected in the Apalachee Bay area (east of Apalachicola) with tides about three feet above normal tonight," the advisory said. "Winds are 40 miles per hour in scattered squalls, mainly east of center, and a few of the heavier squalls have winds around 50 miles per hour. Heavy rains will spread northeast from the Apalachee Bay area tonight.

Remain In Port

"Smal craft from Panama City (70 miles northwest of Apalachicola) to Tampa, Fla., should remain in port tonight."

The Navy's famous hurricane hunters sent their first reconnaissance flight of the 1957 hurricane season into the Gulf of Mexico to probe the weather-churned area.

East Industries Request Data On Area Facilities

Industry officials in the East are particularly interested in finding out about vacant buildings in northeast Louisiana that could be used in case they wish to locate here, according to Walter Koch, executive vice - president of the Monroe Area Industrial Development Corporation.

Koch has just returned from a week-long trip to the cities of Washington, New York and Chicago, where he conferred with officials of more than 50 industries and government agencies.

He said that many officials are planning their expansion programs 5 to 10 years in advance, and that northeast Louisiana industry groups should "plan their programs far in advance to take advantage of the long range thinking of industry."

Pilot May Have Discovered Cause Of Fatal Air Disaster

By ROBERT J. SERLING
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP) — An airline pilot, thumbing through an aircraft manual a few weeks ago, may have stumbled on a solution to the mysterious crash of a Northeast Airlines DC-6A on Rikers Island, N. Y., last Feb. 1. Twenty persons were killed.

The manual, that of another airline but covering the operation of its DC-6s, contained this sentence:

"If the trim tab is moved and no response is noted, move to center immediately or a violent maneuver may result."

Trim tabs are devices to keep an airliner's flight level. They are small, adjustable slats on the wings and rudder. Pilots set them to compensate for any weight shifting inside the plane, such as passengers moving about.

Veered Sharply

Only in this one manual was there any reference to an apparently jammed trim tab. The Northeast DC-6A, taking off for Miami in a snowstorm, yawed sharply just before crashing.

It was that swift, unexplained veering off course which puzzled investigators. It occurred so fast the crew did not even remember it happening. To the trained mind and eyes of the pilot checking that manual, the evidence pointed to a suddenly-released trim tab in the rudder.

The United Press learned of the suspected rudder trouble from a member of the Airline Pilots Association Safety Committee which aided in the Rikers Island probe —and spent $20,000 in union funds in the process.

One Sentence

"We had borrowed a DC-6 and put it through everything in the book, trying in vain to duplicate that sudden turn to the left," the pilot said. "Finally, we started looking through DC-6 flight manuals for the various lines using the ship and came across that one sentence. Apparently just this single company had once experienced some trim tab difficulty and inserted the warning in its manual."

The safety expert explained that the rudder trim tab on the Northeast plane may have been frozen by ice just before takeoff. As the plane climbed into the warmer air strata, the ice could have melted and release the trim tab so suddenly the crew had no time to react.

Ever See A Diamond On Fire

By Alton Howard

As the hardness of a diamond was seen as the symbol of enduring love, so it's brilliance became the symbol of the fire of love—The flame that burns without consuming.

It is said that some ancient people even called the diamond the "Venus stone", and identified it with the evening star, because of its fire. When you observe a diamond along certain angles, it really does seem to be on fire—But actually it is the unusual property that the diamond possesses, known as dispersion. Ordinarily white light is a mixture of all colors of the rainbow. When light strikes the diamond, approximately 1/3 is reflected to the eye from the surface, while the balance of the light is refracted into the stone. If the diamond is cut properly this light is directed by facets through the stone, and finally re-directed back out the top to the eye. If the stone is too thick or too shallow in proportion to the diameter of the stone then the light will leak out the back of the diamond; thus losing much of its fire and brilliancy. As this light reflects back to the eye the diamond breaks the white light up into the six colors of the spectrum, hence you see the fiery colors. Two diamonds of the same size and quality might be several hundred dollars difference in price due to the wrong proportions and incorrect angle of the facets. (Something to Remember, When a diamond is offered at a bargain or wholesale price.)

Our diamonds are selected & graded with these facts in mind, and if you will drop by, I will be glad to show you how we grade and detect these qualities.

You are invited to come in and see our display of fine diamonds and remember budget terms can easily be arranged. Howard Bros. 116 DeSiard St. Monroe, La.

LSU Museum Completes New State Display

BATON ROUGE, June 8—UP—The Louisiana State University museum of natural science has completed a new exhibit of a typical southern Louisiana scene, Dr. George H. Lowery, director of the museum, said today.

The exhibit features herons and egrets in a nesting colony, included 32 birds, an alligator a bull frog, and a water moccasin among water hyacinths and trees.

P. Ambrose Daigre, curator of exhibits, painted the background scenery, mounted the birds and reptiles, and constructed the swampy and flowery foreground.

The display is a memorial to the late Edward A. McIlhenny, who founded a "bird city" on Avery Island. The exhibit was financed by a donation from McIlhenny's daughters, Mrs. Leila McIlhenny Brown of Destrehan, Mrs. Rosemary Osborne Ohoston, and Mrs. Pauline Simmons of Avery Island.

A sea bird nesting colony is under construction. Financed by the Louisiana Ornithological Society, it is due to be finished by the first of the year.

AT LAKE PROVIDENCE

Beauty Pageant Growing Yearly

LAKE PROVIDENCE (Special) —An expectant hush falls over the crowd as the lights dim and the roll of drums is heard in the background! The time? Sunday, June 30, 1957 — 10:00 p.m. — The place? — Lake providence! The occasion? The crowning of the 1957 Miss Louisiana! Who will it be?

The eighth annual "Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant" will be held in Lake Providence on June 28-30, sponsored by the Lake Providence Junior Chamber of Commerce. The beginnings of the pageant in 1949 were on a small scale, with the sponsorship first being assumed by the North Louisiana Water Carnival Association. Each year the pagent has grown larger and when it was taken over by the J.C.'s in 1953, a total of twelve girls were entered, with spectators numbering about two or three thousand.

This year's show, with more than twenty girls expected to enter, will draw an attendance of approximately eigh. thousand people, according to L. E. Townsend, Jr., president of the local J. C. Chapter.

Townsend said yesterday that plans are nearly completed for staging the biggest and best pageant yet to be held in Lake Providence. Feature attraction will be the guest appearance of Sonny James, the new singing sensation, who will appear each night of the pageant. Other headline acts will also add to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Activities will get underway on Friday, June 28th, when all contestants will register at the American Legion Home. An informal, get-acquainted coke party will be held that afternoon, and the first night of the pageant, beginning at 8:00 p.m. will feature half of the contestants in swim suit competition and half in talent.

On Saturday, a parade of all the lovelies through downtown Lake Providence will be led by a number of bands and floats. Saturday night, the order of appearance for the girls will be reversed and the second half will appear in talent and the others in swim suits.

The judges' tea has been set for Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. in the American Legion Home. Crowning of the winner will take place on Sunday night folliwng the final judging of contestants with the coronation ball climaxing the festivities.

BEAUTY CANDIDATE —Miss Beverly Norman, 19-year-old beauty from Shreveport, will enter the "Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant" as "Miss Caddo." Miss Norman, whose talent is singing, is 5 ft. 5 in. tall, weighs 118 pounds and her measurements are 36-23-36.

Aviation Second In State Industry

BATON ROUGE, June 8 (AP)—Louisiana aviation is the second largest industry in the state, Brig. Gen. T. B. Herndon told the state convention of Amvets today.

Herndon, chief of the aeronautics division of the State Public Works Department, said military, commercial and private aviation lumped together runs a close second to the state's largest industry, the petroleum field.

For years Louisiana never considered aviation a prime factor in the state's economy, he said. "But research has disclosed statistics, revealed for the first time, that the aviation industry is one of the principal factors in our state's economy."

He told the Amvets:

1. Louisiana has nine airlines serving seven key cities, making 184 scheduled stops daily and covering 1,040 miles of designated airways.

2. The state has 137 general air bases and 37 seaplane bases.

3. Military airbases have a 336-million-dollar investment in Louisiana, with employment, including wives and families, at 25,000 and an annual payroll of 95 million dollars.

Another speaker, William Derderian, New Britain, Conn., Marine Corps League national commandant, accused newspapars of seeking to influence soft training programs for military personnel.

Mothers are "leading the parade," he said, and insisted that they should demand instead that their sons be given the best training possible.

Derderian said newspapers editorialize on the need for disciplining teenagers but campaign against tough military training.

Also on the program were commander Mike Gehr of the Louisiana Department, American Legion; Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr.; State Education Supt. Shelby M. Jackson; Henry Starling, Baton Rouge, senior vice commander of the Louisiana Disabled American Veterans; Milt Fraser, Lake Charles, state commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Mrs. Betty Besee, Chicago, National Amvet Auxiliary liaison officer.

Amvet Commander Mike Pizzolato presided.

Train Damaged Most In Crash With Truck Here

A train and truck tangled yesterday at the intersection of Congo and Breard streets and the truck came out the least damaged.

A two-ton 1957 truck owned by Monroe Scrap Material Company was hit by a Missouri Pacific train at the crossing, city police reported, when the truck driver, Willie Coleman, 49, Negro, of 1317½ Breard street failed to see the engine.

Police reported $290 damage to the train, engineered by Olen Whitney, 42, and $100 damage to the heavy truck.

The train had to be pulled back to the shop, it was reported.

Onerous Law

Recently the London Economist enunciated what it called Parkinson's Law. Studies disclosed that the British government's employes increase at the rate of about 5 per cent a year, even though their total work output does not increase in proportion.

The basic premises of Parkinson's Law are: An official wants to multiply subordinates, not rivals. Officials make work for each other. If work runs out, the staff is not reduced. It simply spends more time doing a lesser amount of work.

Studying the British Admiralty, the Economist found that department had a staff of 2,000 in 1914. By 1954 it numbers 33,728 at a time when the British navy had declined.

United States government payrolls tend to prove the law. Between 1900 and 1950 the total labor force of the nation increased about 125 per cent. During the same period government workers increased about 500 per cent. Today one employe in eight work for federal, state or local governments.

The country would be the gainer if this law could be repealed or its effect minimized. If the increase of government workers continues at the rate of 5 per cent or more a year, it is only a question of time until everybody will be working for the government. Then all current efforts to avoid a communist state would have gone for naught.

Red Brainwashers

Red China has decreed that all communist party members shall be brainwashed. But brainwashing for party members — at least for those in good standing—will not be the sort of brainwashing applied to American missionaries and war prisoners in China.

This was stressed by Chou Yang, the party's deputy director of propaganda. "Some people think ideological remoulding not very pleasant words and brainwashing worse," he said. "But people need to wash their brains as well as their faces in this changing world."

Chou was well aware that communist party members in China might shy off from the very word brainwashing as a synonym for torture. He was at pains to explain that the kind he was talking about would be done by persuasion and argument, not by force or intimidation.

Probably it is true that "people need to wash their brains as well as their faces." But people don't need to have their faces washed for them by a totalitarian government, or their brains either. No amount of gentle "persuasion and argument" can make the process anything but an indignity.

Apparently the Peiping government is in the process of taking off its father-will-punish-you mask and putting on its big-brother-loves-you disguise. In both aspects, however, communism insists on treating people as children, to be ruled by persuasion if possible or by force if necessary.

It never occurs to devotees of the red cult to treat men as men.

Member Apathy

What makes it possible for men such as Dave Beck to get complete control of not only the money but the very machinery of unions? How can leaders maintain themselves in power year after year when an alert "constituency" would certainly give them the heave-ho?

Part of the answer is that some unions, such as the Teamsters, are deliberately organized on extremely undemocratic lines. One of the steps which many feel Congress should take is to enact legislation to give members control of their own unions.

But another reason—and it is hard to see how legislation can cure this—is simply apathy on the part of the majority of members in most unions. In some unions, for example, it is estimated that only 1 per cent of the membership attends union meetings or takes active part. No wonder they can be "taken over" for selfish purposes.

This has been portrayed as graphicable to control some unions. No one ever suggested that the majority of the rank and file in those unions were communists. But because of membership apathy the hard core of reds was able to take over.

This is a condition that union members must remedy themselves. No law can do it for them.

Airways

It is good news that a concerted effort is being made on top government levels in Washington to get action on modernizing the airways system of the nation. The President's Aviation Facilities Planning Commission, headed by Edward P. Curtis, has proposed a new independent federal aviation agency.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration is awakening to the need for bringing outdated U. S. airways facilities up to modern standards. The past record of the CAA in modernizing the airways to keep pace with burgeoning air travel is one of delays, feet-dragging and inability to look ahead.

It is tragic that it took the collision of two major airliners with the deaths of 128 persons to bring a change.

The drive to update the airways facilities will require money, but if proper appreciation of the value of a dollar is exhibited, this should not prove an insurmountable barrier. And the cost will be spread over a number of years.

Khrush Predicts Grandchildren In America To Live Under Socialism

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The T-V audience which viewed the first appearance of Nikita Khrushchev in the American home gave a collective Bronx cheer to his prediction that "your grandchildren in America will live under socialism." But to a minority here which watches the country's economy with grave concern, the words of the first secretary of the Communist party were disquieting.

Most of his remarks could be catalogued as the same old shifty, evasive Commie line, but the jibe about a "socialist society" in the U. S. seemed to that minority to have an ominous ring.

The Communist leaders in Russia for the past ten years have been convinced that the American economy would crack and to that end they have contrived to put every possible pressure on it. No one questions that there are shrewd, cunning minds under the Kremlin roof in Moscow. For several years, some observers here have been saying repeatedly that the Soviet purpose is to induce the United States to spend itself into a situation in which government control would have to be so rigid that state socialism would come to pass in everything but name.

Moscow undoubtedly has given up — at least for the next generation — any overthrow of the U. S. government by Communist force. There is circumstantial evidence, however, that the brighter Communist minds have figured that the federal budget and forced spending could be made an alternate weapon to weaken this government to a point where its freedom of action would have to be sharply curtailed.

The first danger point has already been passed, in the opinion of some analysts who base their judgment on the hopeless attitude of high administration officials that no cut in either defense costs or foreign aid is now possible. This view has been strengthened by forecasts now current that expanding programs already approved will push spending to even higher figures in the next few years, with a 75 million dollar budget in sight for the fiscal year 1959.

American confidence is based chiefly on productive capacity which is far ahead of that of the totals behind the Iron Curtain. The more critical view is that if consumption fails to keep pace with production, business experiences a serious decline, and tax collections fall of, the fiscal position of the United States, though it is by far the world's wealthiest nation, could be shaken badly.

The constant increase in federal debt which some Russian schemers have almost certainly figured will ensue if the great bluff of Communist aggression can be maintained, can bring about deficit financing within a few years. That could make the federal debt, now 275 billions, a tremendous burden for a system under which the federal government borrows from its own citizens.

The government must constantly refinance its own loans and has already reached a point where interest rates are being constantly increased in order to attract buyers of federal obligations. If the demand declines, and the value of government bonds drops off, even the federal reserve system could be hard pressed to peg or maintain that value.

It is even possible to visualize some connection between the remark of Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey that the present rate of spending may bring on "a depression that will curl your hair" and Khrushchev's prediction of an American socialist state. One could follow the other, most economists are agreed.

Government money controls could be the beginning of an era which would put the United States government into a straight jacket completely inconsistent with a free economy. That could be the beginning of socialism, and it would be very difficult to back out of. Money controls, conservative economists agree, are only one step from industrial controls, and the stifling of free enterprise.

That may be the Communists' present plan for bringing the United States into the socialist orbit. It would still be a long way from iron fisted, totalitarian Russian communism, but the intimation that Khrushchev had it in mind seemed inescapable to many listeners.

Atoms-For-Peace Treaty Dealing With Uranium-235 Should Be Debated More

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Not more than half a dozen U. S. Senators know what the atoms-for-peace treaty is all about. Yet these mere mortals — with some of the oldest but not the best minds in the Senate — are all the "authorities" we have on the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The IAEA involves our relationship with 80 to 90 foreign nations on the death-dealing subject of Uranium-235. It is a subject too big for a few elderly men. It is a subject of intimate importance, first, to millions of Americans, the living and the unborn; and, second, to billions of non-Americans in these other countries. It is a subject that ought to be debated to the point of exhaustion, not by statesmen alone but by the multitudes. Everybody who can read should get in on the running argument. It goes today like this:

Pro: We can't let the President down. Back in December 1953, he made his atoms-for-peace proposal. The Geneva Conference of 1955 carried the idea along. Eighty nations have already agreed, and 10 more are eligible for IAEA. The back-Ike argument is the strongest one put forward by the Senators in favor of this treaty.

Con: the argument is worthless. The treaty must stand on its own merits. We want no cult of personality in this country. Mr. Eisenhower's favorable opinion on his pet project is, of course, valuable. But it doesn't excuse the 96 Senators from thinking this thing out for themselves. It doesn't mean that 170 million Americans are too stupid to understand.

Pro: If this treaty is not ratified by the Senate, the situation will be comparable to what happened when President Wilson and the League of Nations were rejected. What will the world think of us if we back down?

Con: This country has been independent since 1776. The "world" does not run the United States. When pro-treaty Senators and Cabinet members resort to these rhetorical arguments, it proves the weakness of their case. This treaty is not a pious love-thy-neighbor resolution. It is a practical matter of exchanging goods and services. It is easily the most technical treaty ever negotiated between nations. So let's climb down from the clouds. Let's hear some factual presentation.

Pro: Well, Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Lewis Strauss says this, with his own italics: "The pooling of new discoveries under the aegis of the Agency will help us . . ." He goes on to argue that the United States will actually benefit "by helping to avoid unnecessary duplication of research and by facilitating the exchange of information . . . in conserving nuclear materials and scarce, trained manpower."

Con: Well, let's see. According to Mr. Strauss, the United States began by offering to toss 100 kilograms of U-235 into the World pool. At that time, Russia cautiously agreed to chip in 50 kilograms. Then the U. S. boldly went from 100 kgs. to 5000 kgs., plus 15,000 over a period of years. That makes 20,000 kgs. in all from the U. S. So far (I have just phoned Mr. Strauss' office) the Russians have not raised their offer. No other country, except Britain with a timid 20 kgs., has done any pooling. Now, how is this going to help us?

Pro: Well, Secretary Dulles says: "International cooperation in a new field comparable in importance to the Industrial Revolution can have an effect which will spread far beyond itself."

Con: How vague can you get? Some of us who backed this atoms-for-peace program did so on the understanding that it was a true co-op. But the Administration has not showed any advantage in it for America. The more we hear and learn about the IAEA the more it looks like a typical "Share America" project —not to mention a "One World" movement. Let's hear something about costs to the U. S. and the running of this new multi-nation organization.

Pro: Oh, it won't cost much. Secretary Dulles says: "The administrative expenses of the Agency for its first year of operation would not be expected to exceed $6 million. The maximum share of this that could be assessed to the U. S. would be one-third, or $2 million."

Con: But the 20,000 kgs. of U-235 is estimated at $500 million. What about that?

Pro: Well, you see, the terms of the treaty would require the IAEA to "reimburse" any nation that supplies the U-235.

Con: So all we would have to do is collect. Now, the American people already belong to numerous international associations, including the United Nations, NATO SEATO, and so forth. They would like to know how IAEA is to be governed.

Pro: If we ratify the treaty, there will be a governing body which includes all members. The United States would have one vote, but presumably we would control other votes. The USSR would have three votes, and would undoubtedly control the votes of its satellites.

Con: What else?

Wants Civil Rights Bill Defeated

Monroe, Louisiana

Editor, Morning World:

If Negroes want racial integration, let them measure up to the health, marital, and moral standards of the white people. I am a Methodist, and I do not advocate mixing of the races. Do you want your children or your children's children to marry Negroes? Do you think God intended for the races to integrate or become half-breeds? I think God intended for every living creature to bring forth young after his own kind or likeness. Isn't that what the Holy Bible teaches? Read Genesis 1:24-27.

I read a pamphlet called "The Ugly Truth about the N.A.A.C.P." It was an address by Attorney General Eugene Cook of Georgia made before the 55th annual convention of the Peace Officers Association of Georgia. This pamphlet states that W.E.B. DuBois was one of the "modern scientific authorities" whose writings were accepted by the United States Supreme Court as the basis for its decision of May 17, 1954, prohibiting segregation in the public schools. W. E. B. DuBois, who was one of the five founders of the N.A.A.C.P., has a record as being a participant in Communist, Communist-front and subversive organizations. Think that over carefully.

"Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." (St. Matthew 7:15-17.)

The June issue of The Reader's Digest says that there is racial trouble in Chicago. "Police records show that although whites outnumber Negroes by four to one, the number of Negroes arrested in many types of crime comes close to or exceeds the number of whites arrested." The preceding statement was quoted from the June, 1957, issue of The Reader's Digest.

Let's defeat the civil rights' bill, which is a menace to our liberties. Are we not still freedom-loving Americans?

R. KENNETH BUSBICE

West Monroe, La.

Editor, Morning World:

For a long time I have been wanting to express my views on the so called civil rights bill, after seeing in the Morning World about the views of a so - called church group. I am a deacon in a Baptist church and have been one for a long time and I haven't found the first Baptist yet that wants the colored and white race to mix. Say what you may we know when they go to the same schools, mix and mingle at playgrounds, swimming pools and so on we soon wouldn't have any white or colored race — only a yellow race. I know the white people don't want that and I don't believe that most of the colored race does either.

We want to see the colored people have good schools and want to help them in every way to have a better life. They have advanced faster than any race of people I know of these last few years.

Unless this civil rights business is stopped it will do away with our public schools altogether. The leaders of this move can't see very far ahead or they would stop pushing it. I can't for my life see what some of the northern lawmakers are studying about. They are only widening the break that had almost completely healed between the north and the south.

We don't believe God would have us mixing in schools and other places. I know I am speaking for the majority of the south.

Your Only Value

WHAT is the value of your life? . . . What does it mean to you? The chance to strive for comfort and . . . To make your dreams come true? . . . To harvest happiness on earth . . . Wherever it may be . . . And maybe gain a golden fame . . . For future history? . . . Then you are selfish in your heart . . . And wrong in your desire . . . Because your motive should be on . . . A level so much higher . . . The real and only value of . . . Your life depends today . . . On how you serve your neighbor in . . . Your most unselfish way . . . The only, lasting value of . . . Your life upon this sod . . . Is not how happy you may be . . . But how you honor God.

CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

Congressional Wives Only Party Line Is At Receptions

WASHINGTON, June 8 — The "party line" may keep Republican and Democratic Congressmen on separate sides of the aisle on Capitol Hill, but for the Congressmen's wives who belong to the Congressional Club the only "party line" is the one they stand in at club receptions.

In the political beehive that is Washington, the Congressional Club is exceedingly proud of its non-political setup. Its stated purpose is "to promote acquaintanceship, facilitate social intercourse, and provide a meeting place for the ladies who are in official life in Washington."

So determined is the group to remain non-partisan, that when it was decided to hold a "white elephant" sale last year, the members diplomatically announced it as a "white elephant and purple donkey" sale.

The 500-member club, in addition to Congressional wives, includes women Members of Congress, Cabinet and Supreme Court wives. Associate memberships are open to daughters and daughters-in-law of members. Honorary membership always is extended to wives or official hostesses of the President, Vice President and the Speaker of the House.

Although applicants are screened by a membership committee, the club maintains that it is strictly "non-sectarian, non - political and non-propagandic." The club's presidency, changing every two years, rotates between Republican and Democratic members, and its committees are balanced on both party and geographical lines.

Membership Retained

Club membership frequently is retained by members whose husbands either have left Washington political life or are deceased. They may remain active members or become non-resident members, depending on how active they want to remain in Club activities.

Mrs. John J. Williams, the club president and wife of the Republican Senator from Delaware, says the club is proudest of its success in acquainting members with Washington protocol and making them feel at home.

Mrs. Ralph Harvey, wife of the Republican Representative from Indiana and a club member since 1948, agrees that the club does a "tremendous job" for newcomers. "I felt like such an outsider when I came to Washington," she recalls. "But now, I can hardly wait to come back." Thanks also to the non-partisan nature of the club, Mrs. Harvey adds, "some of my best friends are Democrats."

Mrs. Williams says there is so much for newcomers to Washington political life to learn that "even a little thing like when to wear your gloves is a problem." "We simply tell the wives either to wear them both or take them both off, etiquette books to the contrary." She recalls how one freshman wife, advised "back home" to always wear her gloves at social functions, was discovered pouring tea, complete in high white gloves.

Protocol was a frightening thing in the club's early days, according to Mrs. Albert E. Carter, wife of a former California Representative. There were more than 600 official calls that could be made when she came to Washington in 1925, Mrs. Carter says, "provided you had the determination and the stamina." Seniority was so carefully observed that, from habit, Mrs. Carter admits she still glances carefully around before entering an elevator to see who should precede her.

Today the club lists for newcomers only these "essential" calls: the White House, wives of the Vice President and Speaker, women of the wife's state delegation and wives of chairmen and ranking members of their husbands' Congressional committees. The club adds this caution: "A woman never calls on a bachelor or a widower, regardless of his official position."

Friends Tell Friends

Wives of freshmen Congressmen frequently learn of the club from friends, but the club president sends a note to each newcomer telling her about the group and inviting her to join. Newcomers Mrs. Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, Mrs. Charles H. Brown of Missouri and Mrs. Frank Church of Idaho agree they are impressed with the club's friendly atmosphere and feel "it's a nice place to entertain visitors."

Credit for the club's beginnings goes to a Congressman. Rep. Frank Lowden, who later became Governor of Illinois, remarked at a dinner party in 1906 that the wives ought to have a club of their own. His suggestion was well made, for the club archives relate that in those days wives "saw little and enjoyed almost no social life in the Capitol. . . . So many women found it pleasanter to stay at home." By 1908 club organization was completed, and 180 members sought to remedy things for the lonely Congressmen's wives.

Today's club schedule might make some members wish for a little time alone. Here it is: Monday, executive board meeting, luncheon, bridge game; Tuesday, Red Cross projects, guest speakers; Wednesday, classes in such things as protocol, public speaking (the most popular course), millinery, languages, flower arranging, and private luncheon parties; Thursday, formal "invitation" luncheons; Friday, tea, guest speakers; Saturday, dances for teen-agers, square dancing for adults; Sunday, receptions, buffet suppers.

The clubhouse is a gray stone, town-house-type building. It has lounges and meeting rooms on the first floor; kitchen, dining and ballrooms on the second floor. The circular ceiling over the ballroom is hung with flags of the states, in order of their admittance. In the entrance hall is a Victorian cutglass table lamp members proudly point out as a gift from Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

The clubhouse, which was dedicated in 1914, is on land given to the club by the late Mrs. John B. Henderson, wife of a Missouri Senator. Mrs. Henderson also signed notes for $30,000 for construction and furnishings. On the club's 40th anniversary in 1948, the mortgage was burned by Mrs. Harry S. Truman. Before moving into the present building, the club rented quarters, with members lending the furnishings. Members tell of one woman who loaned the group her entire silver service, then sent along her butler to "keep an eye" on it.

Open Six Months

The club is open only from January to June, but by the time Congress adjourns the wives, too, are ready for a rest. With 33 committees to work on, they have their hands full. Activities are highlighted annually by a breakfast honoring the First Lady, a Founder's Day "brunch," an art show and receptions for top Government officials. From time to time the women also compile a cook book of their favorite recipes, which sells for $2.50 a copy. Proceeds go into a building upkeep fund, and the cook book sells so well that it provided money for a complete refurnishing of the clubhouse in 1953.

PAUL HARVEY

H-Bomb Attack Will Mean Return To The Old Laws

In the ancient, uncivilized societies of the desert and jungle the aged, the infirm and the incurably ailing were sent off alone to die.

Their presence was an unnecessary burden on the rest of the community.

We know now that their removal robbed the remainder of much mature judgment and so deterred progress, delayed enlightenment.

But it was expedient to spare the living.

It was centuries before warriors began to return to the scene of battle to rescue their wounded.

They did it in spite of the increased burden it created because such acts of mercy inspired greater allegiance in the ranks.

"One for all, all for one" became the battle cry of several civilized generations.

What cruel irony that the ultimate in progress leads us right back to the law of the jungle.

Today we abandon our fighting men in enemy prisons, assuming it is in our own "enlightened self-interest" to do so.

Today a new booklet published by the Civil Defense Administration discusses a hypothetical attack on our homeland in the 1960's and recommends that we treat the most seriously injured . . . last.

This booklet, seeking to anticipate a hydrogen holocaust, assumes that 250 H-bombs would be dropped on 144 American targets. (Every state except Mississippi.)

An estimated 82 million Americans would be killed.

After two-thirds of us are dead or injured, the other third is counseled to give its first medical attention to those who are least injured.

Top priority should go to those who might be healed sufficiently to return to work promptly.

Or to carry on the fight.

Those expected to die should be given priority "number five."

When the medicine is doled out, they would be last in line.

Of course, this sounds merciless to a civilized society.

We have been taught, after a mass mishap, to treat the most seriously injured first.

But where intelligence dignifies the individual . . .

The jungle allows only for the survival of the fittest.

The rule which heretofore has been confined to ancient tribal custom or to the extremities of fiction now becomes the recommended procedure for the civil defense of our ultramodern society.

And the evolution of man has taken him one full turn now. . .

36,000 MILES ON KETCH

Scientist, Family End 'Impossible' Ocean Trip

NEW YORK, June 8 (AP) — An American scientist has sailed a 50-foot ketch here on a 36,000-mile trip from Japan—firmly rejecting any idea that he sought adventure.

Dr. Earl L. Reynolds, 46, Yellow Springs, Ohio, was accompanied on the roundabout voyage aboard the two-masted Phoenix by his wife and two children.

They expect to sail back to Japan.

"Adventure?" Reynolds asked today at Staten Island, where the trim craft tied up yesterday. "We are not looking for adventure. The less the better. We are out for a good time."

Reynolds summed up the trip this way: "We reached New York within a week of the date we had scheduled when we started out in 1954.

"We lived on vegetables, fruit, canned meats, dried milk and had menus that would be considered good anywhere.

"We also kept in fine health and had no difficulty with the boat or anything else."

This outcome defied virtually all advance predictions. Yachting experts in Japan had implored him not to make the trip. They said he lacked sufficient seagoing experience and that the boat was built for sailing the Inland Sea, not the ocean.

For weeks after the Phoenix set out from Japan she went unreported, one reason being that she has no radio transmitter. The Japanese coast guard waged an intensive search and ruefully reported the ketch "undoubtedly lost."

But Reynolds sailed calmly into Honolulu a few days later, unaware there had been any concern about him.

Reynolds, formerly associated with Antioch College at Yellow Springs, was sent to Japan in 1951 by the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission to study the effects of atomic radiation on Japanese children.

From Honolulu, the Phoenix sailed south to Tahiti and then east to the Philippines, Indonesa, Australia, across the Indian Ocean, around Africa's Cape of Good Hope, across the Atlantic to Brazil and then north to the American East Coast.

Reynolds, his wife, Barbara, 41; his son, Ted, 18, and daughter, Jessica, 13, will spend some time in New York to "see the town."

With them are three University of Hiroshima students who also are making the trip — Mickey Suemitsu, Miichi Mikami and Moto Fushima.

They will sail the Phoenix to South Norwalk, Conn., in about a week for an overhaul and to visit Mrs. Reynold's cousin David Dorn. They will cruise along the Eastern Seaboard during the summer and set out about Nov. 1 on a 15,000-mile return to Japan via the Panama Canal and Galapagos Islands.

and professional men take part in the broadcasts, the senator stressed: "I am not talking of merely one reply to Khrushchev by the President or some other official."

President Eisenhower told his news conference Wednesday that "somebody in the government"—but not himself—would be glad to answer Khrushchev if the Russians would air the reply without jamming or otherwise interfering with it.

See No Excuse

Expressing doubt Khrushchev could advance any logical reason for not allowing Russians to hear American proposals, as the Americans heard his, Johnson said:

"We should not let a single day pass without raising this issue. We should call it up in the United Nations; we should make it a basic proposal in all disarmament talks; we should insist upon it every time a Russian representative is within earshot."

Johnson said he had no fear that Americans would be swayed by Communist propaganda.

But he saw the proposed broadcasts as a chance to present free world ideas which would be new to the Russian people.

"The Russian people have never had an opportunity to weigh the free world's proposal for the control of atomic energy," Johnson said. "They were never informed about it openly and frankly. They never knew that Stalin provoked an arms race that, if continued, must end in the total elimination of mankind."

Girard Backers Send Delegation To White House

American sympathizers say he should be tried by a U. S. Army court-martial; Japanese authorities insist he should be turned over to their courts under international agreements.

Sen. Hruska (R-Neb) said these agreements "should be properly modified or repudiated at the earliest possible moment."

"They deprive our soldiers of many rights guaranteed them under our Constitution and Bill of Rights", Hruska said.

He added in a statement: "One of America's oldest and finest traditions has been that the American flag and the American Constitution follow our soldiers wherever they go."

Sen. Hennings (D-Mo), chairman of the subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, said he did not think the Girard case indicated any necessity "for a change in our treaties and status of forces agreements in general."

Referring to the status of forces agreements, under which U. S. servicemen may be tried by the local courts for off-duty offenses, Hennings said:

"These international arrangements permit American armed forces to be stationed in friendly countries in order to strengthen and protect the free world; provisions are made for fair trials and criminal law jurisdictions; these protections might not be available otherwise to American troops under some concepts of international law in the absence of treaties and international agreements."

Soldier Girard is accused of fatally injuring the Japanese woman last January by firing an empty cartridge case from a grenade launcher.

TOKYO, Sunday, June 9 (AP)—A young Illinois soldier and his family have opened an all-out fight against attempts to turn him over to a Japanese criminal court for trial. They are battling a decision by the U. S. Army and State Department approved by President Eisenhower.

U. S. Army Specialist 3.C. William S. Girard personally entered the legal skirmishing Saturday by firing the Japanese attorney he named Thursday to defend him on a charge of killing a Japanese woman collecting scrap on a military firing range last Jan. 30. The charge is similar to manslaughter in the United States and carries a 2 to 15 year prison term on conviction.

Girard's action, taken upon instruction of his brother, Louis, 28, in Ottawa, Ill., was a move to deny Japanese jurisdiction.

Itsuro Hayashi, the 64-year-old Japanese attorney, said he had no objection if Girard wanted to discharge him but that Girard's move to deny Japanese jurisdiction was too late. He said the soldier had already acknowledged it by signing documents which Hayashi deposited Friday in district court at Maebashi.

"Only the court can approve my dismissal," Hayashi said. "To obtain it, Girard must file new documents which would further acknowledge the court's jurisdiction."

Legal sources were inclined to dispute Hayashi's argument that Girard had acknowledged Japanese jurisdiction by signing the documents. These sources said even if the case comes to trial a normal early defense move would be to ask dismissal on grounds the court has no jurisdiction.

Mason, Republican of Illinois, credits Mahon with the clearest and finest picture of this forest of defense. "I listened with the greatest of attention," he explained.

Also Holmes Alexander, in his column the same day, declared that "Mahon knows more about the budget than does Ike himself."

A well deserved honor has just come to Capt. Louis Mockabee in a letter from Commissioner William J. Dray, who is territorial commander for the Salvation Army. He states that the Captain is now to be advanced in rank to that of major and he states:

"The long years of service and loyalty to the principles of the Army bring me much gratification. It is indeed a pleasure to see you advanced to higher rank. This I know will bring you in humility before God; and I pray that there may be a renewal of your consecration and loyalty to the Army, the dedication of yourself to the great task of winning souls and building the Kingdom."

"Your leaders appreciate the great service you have rendered."

Without question as Captain of the Army here, this man has made a marvelous record. The Salvation Army has advanced tremendously under the present leader. We feel that he has placed the Salvation Army on the map of Monroe as a great service order for the rescuing of humanity and directing it toward the Kingdom of God.

Still great continued success to you Major Mockabee!

Great crowded super markets form a setting for humor as well as great concentrated business enterprise. Here is an amusing experience. In a crowded place of this nature, a man's voice resounded: "Lady you've dropped your slip!" was his masculine salutation.

With rising embarrassment, the well-groomed lady addressed, later explaining that she did know that an elastic was a bit wavering as she dressed to go on the market trip. Now she knew the worst had happened, — it must have given way.

Again the man repeated his kindly worded entreaty: "Lady you've dropped your slip," he said.

"Oh don't hand it to me now this way!" she blurted out in ill-concealed desperation, at the same instant holding out her hand. And what did he hand her?

He handed her the shopping list of supplies needed!

Mrs. Williams apparently was on the side of the youngsters. She was described as not being cooperative with police. She refused to talk further with newsmen after the Washington Evening Star quoted her as saying:

"These kids are madly in love. The few times I have seen them together recently my heart just broke. The girl — she's a lovely girl — said she did not want to go back to Sweden."

50-Mile Winds Hit In Squalls

Lt. (J. G.) Howard J. Walter of Buffalo, N.Y. took off before noon.

A similar tropical disturbance in September, 1956, swelled into Hurricane Flossie which took more than a dozen lives and inflicted millions of dollars property damage in Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia and Alabama coastal areas.

Steady rains backed by wind gusts have hit north Florida, south Alabama, south Georgia and northeast South Carolina. Some Florida points measured more than three inches.

New Orleans, which is on the southeast fringe of flood-hit areas of the south and southwest, has not been hit by heavy rains.

Federal weather forecasters in New Orleans said the disturbance "will not blow itself out." But they declined to say how hard coastal regions will be hit.

If winds in the squalls go beyond 30 miles an hour in a wide area, the disturbance will be tagged a storm. When winds hit 75 miles an hour, it becomes a hurricane, according to the New Orleans weather bureau.

The advance rains from the disturbance left more than three inches at Apalachicola, and Cross City, Fla., and more than two inches in Tallahassee. Heavier rains are expected.

The plane crew's mission is to "investigate weather conditions in the lower Gulf of Mexico, where there is said to be possibilities of future tropical storm development," the Navy said.

Gambling Doors Slammed Shut In Galveston Area

AUSTIN, Tex., June 8 (AP)—Atty. Gen. Will Wilson reported today that the lid had been slammed shut on Galveston gambling and warned that gambling elsewhere in the state would be rooted out.

The "largest criminal enforcement mission ever called together in Texas" was ready to be sprung on the plush port city gambling clubs when gamblers decided to pull out, Col. Homer Garrison, head of the Department of Public Safety, said. Galveston long has been known as a wide-open city.

"Our purpose is to shut down gambling in Texas and we will keep it down," Wilson told newsmen.

Garrison told a press conference 60 rangers and other top officials of his department and 23 assistant attorneys general met secretly in Houston's Junior League Auditorium.

Ex-Area Man, Killer Of 3, Seeks Parole

CLINTON, Tenn., June 8 (AP)—A state prisoner was brought here under guard from Nashville to confer with his Clinton attorney about a possible parole from three life sentences — imposed in the slayings of three members of his estranged wife's family.

Robert Grover Duke, 42, formerly of Bastrop, La., was convicted on three counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of his mother in-law, his father-in-law and his wife's brother-in-law. The three were shot and fatally wounded at the home of his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard H. Barker, at nearby Oak Ridge on Jan. 23, 1954.

Many Seek Release

At Oneida, Tenn., Dist. Atty. Gen. John Lee West said a "large number of persons" — including "the governor of Louisiana" — have sought Duke's release. In addition, he said, "several attorneys" have requested that he be recommended for a pardon or parole.

"I haven't recommended clemency," West added, "and I don't see how, in good conscience, I could do so, unless some new evidence comes up in the case."

Duke was convicted of slaying Mr. and Mrs. Barker and John P. Stephens, who was at the Barker home with his wife. Testimony at Duke's trial showed that he had entered the Barker apartment, announced "I've come to get my wife and kids," and started shooting.

Mrs. Barker, who witnesses testified was shot a second time as she prayed for mercy, died instantly. Her husband died about eight hours later of multiple pistol wounds.

Stephens was shot four times in the stomach and died the following April 8 in an Oak Ridge hospital.

Doghouse Home For Ducklings

Midge has a very "ducky" doghouse. Midge, a terrier, has adopted two small black and white ducklings, and shares space in her kennel with them.

Her owner, Mrs. E. E. Robinson, 604 Mathew, reported that she discovered the unusual situation yesterday. The ducklings are off-springs of "Spotty," a duck owned by next-door neighbors, who has disappeared.

The "heads of the houses" at both residences are with the police department. E. E. Robinson is a patrolman, and Howard Brown, 601 Matthew, who is owner of the ducks, is a maintanence worker with the department.

Presses A Button Slices Up Trains

By WILLIAM FERRIS

NEW YORK, June 8 (AP) — Peter Smith is an ordinary guy who, on any given day, has considerable power. Pete presses buttons.

And when Pete presses a button, he slices up a freight train as if it were a hunk of bologna, divvying up the pieces — you call them cars — along any number of 63 different railroad tracks.

Pete works at the control panel in the hump tower of the New York Central's new freight classification yard at Buffalo.

Freight cars to be classified are pushed to the crest of the hump by locomotives whose crews are directed by radio and color light signals.

As the cars passed the hump, Pete pushes his buttons. That sets switches all along the line, sending one car down one route of tracks, a second another route, a third still another route. The speed of the cars is controlled by electronic retarders on the wheels.

Pete is in the center of a railroad revolution.

Throughout the country railroads are rushing into automation and mechanization. They're experimenting and adopting new, novel techniques. It's a gigantic effort to maintain or expand earnings, to keep from sinking into the red, to meet competition from other types of transportation.

Out of it have come some interesting developments:

The Santa Fe has installed several hundred miles of continuous welded rail. Each rail is one quarter mile long. It is transported to the site on railroad flat cars. When the train goes around a bend, the rail just bends with the train.

The Chesapeake & Ohio is testing an electronic detector to spot overheated journal boxes on railroad cars. Detector units, equipped with infrared lenses, parallel the tracks. When a hot journal box goes by, the detector flashes a warning and the train is stopped.

The Southern Pacific soon will put into full operation an electronic computer system to keep an up-to-the-minute check on where its empty box cars are.

The Northern Pacific is installing a 2,000-mile transcontinental dial telephone system, the longest system of its type in the country.

The Chicago and North Western gives its diesel engines a periodic "blood test" with a device known as a quantometer. This detects potential engine trouble by running a check on the engine's fuel.

The Pennsylvania uses 105 television cameras and 100 television receivers, making the world's largest closed circuit television installation, at its ticket sales bureau in New York's Penn Station.

The New Haven later this year will install a new electronic ticket reservation system. The ticket agent, by punching keys on a machine resembling a cash register, may determine in moments just what space is available on any train for a month ahead.

A large number of other electronic and mechanical contraptions are used on the nation's 225,149 miles of track. But probably the three most important are: push button yards, centralized traffic control (CTC) and new office machines.

Illinois Central established the first push-button yard at its Markham Yards, near Chicago. Other railroads which have them include Seaboard Air Line, Northern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Frisco, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Milwaukee and Southern.

The object of CTC is to make one track do what two formerly did. The New York Central, completing CTC on its line from Cleveland to Buffalo this year, gained three million dollars from salvage of excess track.

Here's how CTC works:

A man sits at an electronic control panel. Tiny lights on the panel show him the exact location of every train in his division.

All the signals and switches along that division are operated through remote control by this one man. He regulates movement of trains by pulling levers.

Results: traffic flows more smoothly, swiftly. Costs are cut.

The Missouri Pacific says that use of CTC has resulted in savings of from 25 to 30 per cent when compared with operations over the same trackage without CTC. Approximately 10 per cent of the lower cost is in payroll savings.

Railroads have gone in for the big, brainy machines with all the quick answers. Union Pacific has electronic computers at its Omaha headquarters which, the road estimates, could do the daily arithmetic problems of Omaha's 30,000 school kids in less than a minute.

The computers are used in the road's timekeeping and payroll work.

Chespeake & Ohio employs Remington - Rand's Univac for such essential duties as punching out pay checks. The road estimates it will save $500,000 a year by using Univac.

The railroad revolution saves money. It is an effort on the part of the roads to compete with trucks and airborne freight in the freight business and with buses, airplanes and private automobiles in passenger business.

Central Buys Lot For Branch Bank On Jackson St.

The Central Savings Bank and Trust Company yesterday announced the purchase of property at 1900 Jackson street as a site for a southside branch bank. The property was bought from Mrs. Lula Mae Gammell Leggett, John M. Breard, president, announced.

In making the announcement, Breard said bank officials have been studying southside locations for some time, with a view toward providing better service to businesses and residents south of DeSiard and east and west of the Missouri Pacific lines.

Plans for the building are now in the hands of the architects with construction slated to get underway as soon as possible.

Central Bank recently announced the acquisition of property near the paper mill in West Monroe.

These two locations to the bank's facilities will give the bank five locations of service to the Twin Cities, Breard said.

Vandalism Here Blamed On Kids

A number of cases of vandalism in Ouachita parish has been reported over the past several weeks, Buster Crowley, Jr., parish juvenile officer, said yesterday. In most of the instances investigation points to the work of juveniles, he added.

Recent apprehensions of juveniles have cleared up a number of the reports; however, still to be cleared are several more.

In announcing the series of instances, Crowley pointed out that, where possible, the juveniles or their parents are being held liable for damage done to the property.

The officer warned that "appropriate action will be taken in all cases."

Recently reported to either the juvenile or sheriff offices have been instances of destruction of mail boxes, which is also federal violation, damage to boats and other property. In one particular case in Ouachita parish a whole flock of ducks have been wiped out by juveniles who ran over the birds with motorboats.

HEART PATIENT—This 5½-year-old boy has a chance to live only if a delicate heart operation is successful, doctors say. He is Tommy Lee Free, son of Mr. and Mrs. Narlon Free of Monroe. Tommy is scheduled to undergo surgery for a congenital heart condition. His parents said the operation would cost approximately $1500, and they don't have the money, but plan to go ahead. Donations for Tommy are being taken at Lake Shore Baptist Church. (Staff photo by Scotty Maxwell)

Man Receives Flesh Wound In Shooting

RUSTON (Special) —A Choudrant man, who allegedly shot twice at his father-in-law and missed, Saturday was in a Monroe hospital after his wife's father reportedly returned a shot.

Hospitalized at E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital was R. L. Alford, in his mid 20's, who received a minor flesh wound in his left thigh, hospital attendants said.

Lincoln Parish Chief Deputy Sheriff George Simonton reported that Alford's wife had returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Williams, nearby, after martial trouble.

Alford appeared at Wiliams' home early Saturday morning, carrying a 12-gauge shotgun, Deputy Simonton said, and after a heated discussion, Alford reportedly fired at his father-in-law and missed.

Alford left after the incident, Simonton continued, but returned about noon, with the shotgun in his hands, and after an argument, again shot at Williams. He missed the second time, Simonton related.

Then Williams brought out his 12 gauge shotgun, loaded with buckshot, shot at Alford and hit him in the thigh, the investigating officer said.

Alford was taken to the charity hospital in Monroe. Lincoln Parish authorities have requested Alford be turned over to them when he is released from the hospital within the next few days.

Since the shooting occurred on the Ouachita - Lincoln parish line authorities of both parishes conducted an investigation.

No charges had been filed against Williams late Saturday.

MAJ. RICHARD KOOS

Major Koos Assigned To 9th Infantry

Maj. Richard B. Koos, assistant professor of military science and tactics at Northeast State, will report about July 1 to Fort Carson, Colorado, where he has been assigned to the 9th Infantry Division.

The officer has been stationed at the college since December 1954 when he joined the military faculty as assistant PMS&T of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. He was acting professor of military science and tactics during the period between the resignation of Maj. Derwood Cann, Jr., to enter private business, and the assignment of Lt. Col. Howard P. Landry to head the ROTC here.

Maj. Koos, a native of Oklahoma City, came to Monroe following duty in Germany. He has been an officer in the U. S. Army since 1940 except for two and one-half years when he left service for industry.

Returning to the army in 1949, he was sent to Fort Riley, Kansas, for three years, then was transferred to Fort Campbell, Ky., for an additional three-year tour of duty to become operations officer of the 7th Corps Artillery.

He went with the corps to Germany, where later he was assigned to the 30th Field Artillery Group at Heilbronn, Germany. From there he was sent in the latter part of 1954 to the United States and reported for duty at Northeast State.

Since his affiliation with the college, Major Koos has been active in campus organizations. He has been serving as faculty sponsor of the Pershing Rifles, an honorary military fraternity recently organized here, and is on the board of control of the college chapter, Tau Kappa Epsilon, national-social fraternity.

Major Koos' family will leave Monroe about the time he reports to Fort Carson.

Cotton Future Prices Score Gain In Week

NEW YORK, June 8 (AP)—Cotton futures prices scored good gains this week on buying induced to a considerable extent by unfavorable crop conditions.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange posted net gains ranging from 50 cents to $2.65 a bale. All deliveries except nearby July made new life-of-contract highs.

Buying was encouraged by continued heavy rainfall in the western part of the cotton belt and by reports of increased insect infestation east of the Mississippi.

Other bullish factors included diminishing prospects of new cotton legislation during he present session of congress, and a growing belief that the 1957 loan rate will be fairly well above the guaranteed minimum.

Advances were held in check by light hedge selling and periodic profit-taking attracted by the rise in prices.

Traders noted a report by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau that the Commodity Credit Corporation on May 31 had only 1,890,000 bales of cotton on hand with which to meet sales requirements under its export program between now and July 31.

Spurred by the CCC program, total exports of U.S. cotton for the current season passed the 7-million-bale mark Tuesday, June 4. This compared with a total of only 1,869,000 bales at approximately the same time last season.

Exports for the week ended Tuesday amounted to 101,000 bales, according to an estimate by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau. This compared with shipments of 175,000 bales the previous week, and with 71,000 bales in the like week a year ago.

There is every indication that total exports for the season ending July 1 will reach 7½ million bales, it was noted.

Crippled Plane Lands Safely At Norfolk Air Base

NORFOLK, Va., June 8 (UP) An Eastern air liner with 74 persons aboard and one engine aflame made a pre-dawn emergency landing on a Navy strip today, escorted by crash trucks which raced alongside the plane and spewed foam on the fire.

"Thanks to the Navy it was a routine landing," said Capt. E. Q. Ford, pilot of the four - engined DC7B. "The Navy's quick action was the main reason we had no trouble. We got down from 19,000 feet in five minutes and our only injury was some woman who turned her ankle while stepping out of the plane."

"There was absolutely no panic," Ford said. "We had all 68 passengers and six crew members out of the plane within four minutes after we landed."

The big passenger plane was on a flight from Miami to Boston with the first stop slated for Newark, N. J., when fire broke out in the engine as the plane was passing over Norfolk. Ford reported the trouble to the CAA and was advised to land at the naval air station instead of the municipal airport because the Navy was better equipped to handle the fire.

The Navy co-operated "beautifully, better than I could have hoped for," Ford said. "They cleared the air strip in a hurry and had five fire trucks waiting for us when we touched down."

Ford said the fire trucks started spraying the flaming engine with foam as soon as the plane's wheels touched the runway. By the time the plane taxied to a stop, the fire trucks, racing alongside, had brought the fire under control.
